

Dale Potter began painting as a teenager. His first experience with oil painting was an illustration for a high school Latin class project. While in high school he painted several landscapes. He did not paint again until 1999 after returning from an extended sailing trip. Since then he has painted still life, landscapes and plein air.

Dale Potter is retired from a career as an academician and public health dentist. He currently lives in Albuquerque where he continues to paint and enjoy nature.